The Great Paderowski is Coming-

Paderewski will give his plano recital at the Hyperion on Tuesday evening. December 3, and there is no doubt but Mr. Paderewski is a man of well-disciplined mind. He has broadened his perceptions and strengthened his reasoning powers by the study of many subjects not connected with music. His innate refinement has been polished by culture, and he has also made himself a complete master of musical construction. He analyzes a composition with the skill of a mathematician, but with the feeling of a man of powerful musical temperament. uake were felt here and at Chalces, goes through this analytical process with the smallest works in his repertory, as well as with the largest, is abundantly demonstrated by the ex quisite adjustment of his purely technical effects. Not a single measure is ever read in a slovenly manner, but each one is treated with the most loving care for its melodic outline, its individual rhythm, its rhythmic relation to the remainder of the phrase, and its office as an element in the composition as a whole. No matter how rapid or mechanically difficult the passage, the result of Mr. Paderewski's private study as revealed to his hearers is manifested in this remarkable insistence upon the artistic relations of the thousands of tones in a composition oupled with a mastery of tone color which preserves at all times the voca And behind all this lies a mental grasp of the organic unity of the musical work which gives to us a symmetrical and satisfying interpretation. In tone color and exquisite gradations of touch Mr. Paderewski is without a question the greatest master of the keyboard ever known to the
